Training Plan Builds Men To Army Standards

By HOWARD W. BLAKESLEE
Wide World Science Editor
BLOOMINGTON, Ind., Oct. 19.—One hour a day of physical training, five days a week, will in a few months convert the average American young man into a physical hulk meeting army standards generally.

This is shown in the results of universal physical training for men of Indiana university, a war measure inaugurated this year at Indiana and other leading American universities. The Indiana work reveals some special weaknesses in the average young man, in shoulder and upper arm strength and in endurance.

The first five months training of nearly 3,000 men on the five-day, one-hour plan is analyzed by Dr. Karl W. Bookwalter, assistant professor of education. The men worked hard enough in each hour to be tired at the end. They are more healthy, yet there was no change in total weight. Fat men lost some flesh and many have gained. The two balanced each other.

But although unchanged on the scales, after five months, the total weight averaged decided gains in quality. The men were harder, and stronger.

These men made the best gains in the place where they were weakest, the upper arm and shoulder area. But after five months their shoulders had not come up to army standards of strength, and the training was altered to do this by including more work on the parallel bars and the flying ring.

In speed the Indiana students surpassed the army standards. The speed training was in the 20-yard dash and in the 110-yard dash.

This superiority in running speed failed to help much for hiking for the men were below requirements in walking two miles. The reason, Prof. Bookwalter said, was largely because they had not been given long walks. The two-mile walk and progressive hiking were added to the training to bring up this deficiency.

On the whole, after five months, the men were up to most of the army standards. Their endurance, as shown in hiking, was one of the deficiencies. To bring up endurance, Prof. Bookwalter says, will take a long time. That sort of training, he says, ought to start in high school.

High school boys, as shown by average records have been receiving only 17 hours a year of systematic physical training. This can be increased, Prof. Bookwalter says, without adding undue strain on the high school boys.

OHIO SCHOOL HEADS VIEW HUTCHINS PLAN

See Some Merit in Proposal To Shorten Period.

By The Associated Press
COLUMBUS, O., Oct. 19.—Ohio school heads concede that Robert M. Hutchins' proposal to abbreviate orthodox education because of the pending lower draft age has merit, but the suggestion evoked mixed reactions.

The University of Chicago president contends it is possible to complete general education at the age of 20 by using his "6-3-4" plan. Under this, the student spends six years in grade school, four in junior high and high schools and four in college.

Interviewed at last week's state department of education conference, Buckeye school officials expressed mixed views.

Kenneth C. Ray, Ohio director of education, if the war continues for a period of years, naturally there will be efforts to get rid of non-essentials in education. Locally courses might have to go. But any radical change in procedure should be given careful study. A student can absorb only according to his mental capacity.

H. C. Pender, Athens city superintendent of schools, "Hutchins' proposal seems a very intelligent attempt to make the adjustments that are necessary in this emergency. And incidentally, despite statements of college administrators, I have a feeling there are a great many boys in college to 'escape the draft'."

J. L. Blair, dean of Kent State university's college of education, "The plan has merit, both in war and peace time. The condition, however, should not be applied almost entirely to the elementary and high schools."

W. A. Yanch, principal of Roosevelt elementary school, Euclid, "I'm all for the plan, but only if it were worked out cooperatively by elementary, high school and college men. You'll note Hutchins reserves four years for college work."

Poll Shows Public Places Air Power As No. 1 Need

By GEORGE GALLUP
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

PRINCETON, N. J., Oct. 19.—When historians come to write the history of this war, one fact singled out as having utmost importance may be the public's persistent and long-time belief in airpower.

While military experts have debated the importance of airplanes in modern warfare, the man in the street has without exception voted with those who believe that airpower has not yet been given its full and rightful place in World War II.

Only the events of the future will write the final verdict to this controversy. Possibly those events will prove that the layman has placed too much confidence in airpower. On the other hand, the future may prove that the public is as far ahead of its military leaders as in the past it has been ahead of its political leaders.

In a recent column on airpower, Walter Lippman declared that "the argument about airpower represents the kind of profound difference of view among professional men which will in the last analysis have to be settled by laymen."

If laymen were actually called upon to settle the question, airpower would be given far greater emphasis than it now receives.

Seven-Year Record

The institute's studies of the public attitude toward air power go back at least seven years. These studies, cover many issues, including congressional appropriations for the air forces, the question of establishing a separate air arm, where emphasis should be given as between land, sea and airpower, and many other factors. The public's confidence in airpower is not merely a recent enthusiasm—the voters have not been won over just in the last few months or even in the last few years.

On the contrary, the public's attitude was firmly crystallized even before there were any signs of war in Europe or any indications that war might be imminent.

The latest bit of evidence on the public's attitude is a survey completed this week by the institute on the question of which branch of the fighting forces—land, sea or airpower—should have first claim on materials for production.

The issue put to voters throughout the country was as follows:

"If there is a shortage of raw materials for manufacture of war goods, which branch of the service do you think should have first claim on materials—the army, the navy, or the air force?"

About one person in four said he had no opinion, but of those who had a definite opinion, the vote was overwhelmingly in favor of the air force.

Here are the findings:

Army	5%
Navy	11%
Airforce	52%
Don't know	28%

If the vote is confined to those with definite opinions, the ratio is, army 13 per cent; navy 15 per cent; airforce 72 per cent.

Long Term Trend

These results will come as no surprise to those who have followed public opinion trends in recent years on issues involving airpower.

As far back as 1935, just two years after Hitler came to power, the American public was definitely air conscious. In an institute survey at that time the public showed its far-sightedness in not only favoring a larger army and navy, but in voting by 80 per cent for a larger airforce.

That was just the beginning. By 1939, just before Hitler precipitated the war in Europe, the public favored a larger airforce by the overwhelming majority of 91 per cent.

A few months later, in March, 1940, when the army asked for money to buy 1,200 planes, Congress appropriated enough for 59. Yet at that time the common people were not only for a bigger airforce, as indicated above, but were also willing to pay extra taxes to get it.

DISTRIBUTION NOW STEEL MILL PROBLEM

War Production Board Begins Study of Matter.

By The Associated Press
CLEVELAND, Oct. 19.—Manufacturers in steel distribution now are reeling at the attention of the war production board in an attempt to determine the maximum efficiency in steel production, the magazine "Steel" asserts today.

"Reformulation" of distribution are being made to provide for most needed purposes, and to avoid supplies more than necessary for one line of production at the expense of all others.

An example of this action, the journal says, is the apparent decision of the WPP to limit steel plate output to about 1,100,000 tons per month, although available facilities have a capacity of approximately 1,250,000 tons per month.

This plate production suffers for all urgent requirements and the unused capacity releases steel for other products where pressure is heavier, particularly bars and sheets.

After a period of slow buying, sheet orders now are increasing, according to the report, adding to a shortage attributed to diversions and to restrictions on sheet bars. Cold-rolled sheets are in better demand for war purposes, and the supply of hot-rolled sheets for processing is far from sufficient.

With an enlarged tin salvage program now under way, "orders for a reduction in tin plate production are expected, in keeping with restrictions placed on its use. Contracts are being let for several detinning plants, additions to others, and the establishment of a number of shredding plants."

The current scrap salvage campaign is expected to create heavy back-log of scrap, with most steelmakers now having a supply sufficient for as near capacity production as furnace conditions will allow, steel states.

Steelworks operations advanced 14 points last week to 99 per cent. District rates included: Pittsburgh up 14 points to 97; Cleveland up 14 to 96; Detroit down 7 points to 87 because of furnace repairs; Wheeling down five points to 79½; Cincinnati down three points to 82; and Youngstown unchanged at 85.

DISBARMENT HEARING ORDERED AGAINST JUDGE

District Court Member Faces Zanesville Charge.

By The Associated Press
ZANESVILLE, O., Oct. 19.—Common Pleas Judge T. H. Tannehill ordered a bar association committee to file disbarment proceedings against Judge Charles C. Lemert, a veteran member of the Fifth district appellate court.

Lemert, whose six-year term expired Feb. 8 and who is seeking reelection, termed the order a "dirty political trick." Any disbarment action would not affect his present tenure.

Tannehill's order came after a grievance committee report filed with him showed a duplication in accounts and irregularities in a guardianship fund of Anna E. Donkum which, the court said, was administered by Lemert. The report said Lemert made a voluntary settlement of $22,000 in the fund account.

Lemert said the settlement was part of the procedure in closing out his connection in 1916 with the guardianship fund which, he added, was "in good shape" then. He said he was named administrator of the fund in 1922.

5. Later, navy fighters, dive bomber and torpedo types already in action are the best carrier planes in the world.
6. Other types—barrage, reconnaissance, cargo and transport, artillery, fire-supporters, etc.—are "satisfactory in quality" within their own fields.

Stressing that only results in battle provide valid standards of criticism, the report suggested a full appraisal of our planes will be possible "until the war has been won."

It told how alternate superiority of the United States and Great Britain in various types gave the United Nations, as a team, a better choice of weapons than the enemy.

It declared of the future that "the United States aircraft industry and services are in an orderly ferment of developing specialized aircraft of high, and in some cases sensational, promise of battle performance."

While asserting that America had lagged in developing high-altitude fighter planes, the report found numerous favorable things to say about the same types.
"In contrast to their unsuitability for high altitude service in Britain, P-39s and P-40s," the report said, "have shown on the record that they are valuable weapons in Russia and in northern Africa." In these matters, the planes are needed primarily at the relatively low altitudes to cooperate with ground forces and have frequently bested the most highly vaunted of German aircraft. The P-39 was accorded an extra good mark for work in the Aleutians against the Japanese.

A Promise for Tomorrow

BY ELEANOR ATTERBURY

CHAPTER TWENTY-EIGHT

The Man Is Mad

JULIE caught back a scream. "Because of course I couldn't permit that. Not at this hour of the night, the voice went on smoothly. "A young lady alone in these wild mountains!"

"I don't know that Pete stood just inside the black shadow beside the car. How much of their unwarped conversation had he overheard—?"

"Why not," she dared, coolly. "No, I wasn't going anywhere. I just couldn't get to sleep, so I remembered I had aspirin here in my doctor's bag. I came to get it."

She spoke loudly and it seemed her voice rang out across the silent farmyard. Pete couldn't fail to hear—to take warning.

"Then let me help you." He took the bag in one hand and with the other, grasped her arm firmly, helped her out of the car, across the yard, into the house.

Walking beside him, trying desperately to control the trembling that shook her, Julie didn't dare look back, couldn't have seen anyway, probably, whether Pete got into the car unnoticed.

Inside the narrow hallway, Mount's flashlight stabbed a shaft of light up the steps. As she preceded him up the narrow flight, Julie knew real terror.

"Thank you so much," and tried to smile as she reached the door of her room.

"Not at all," a flicker of smile, a short bow.

She closed the door quickly behind her, leaned against it, her breath short as if she'd run miles. Then, even as she listened, horrified, she heard the key turn in the lock.

Automatically, she tried the knob. Then raced to the open window. She even, in her sudden panic, started to climb over the sill. Then common sense caught up with her again. Stupid. She couldn't slide down that roof without rousing the whole household—to say nothing of breaking her neck in the process. There was no escape this way.

She went back to the door again. Prisoner, all right. Flattened against the door jamb, she heard voices from across the hall. Muffled sobbing, then quick steps. A door opened, shut with a bang. Then silence. Long, eerie, unbroken silence hovering like a pall over the darkened house.

Grave Danger

As the moments crept by and still nothing happened, Julie went back to the window, strained to see through the dark. Was Tom's car still there? Or had he gotten away? Was he even now on his way for help? On the alert, his senses waited for sound, movement from the drive. When she fancied she heard a motor starting on the road below the river bridge, she could only hope it wasn't just her own wishful thinking.

She had the answer to part of her questions in a few moments. Just when the very silence itself seemed to shriek warning, footsteps sounded in the hall again. The key turned in a lock, and her door swung open, admitting the uncertain yellow light from the keyhole lamp Arnaldo held in his hand. A yellow light that touched his face, gave it a ghastly pallor.

"So sorry to disturb you, Doctor Hamilton," he said smoothly, closing the door behind him before he set the lamp in a wall bracket. "I assume, however, that you are still—not 'sleepy'?"

Julie stood quietly erect, gathering courage, commanding well-disciplined nerves.

Arnaldo's lips curved into a grimace, a real challenge to her stout-hearted poise. "I understand that my wife has told you the whole story."

Still Julie only watched him, silently.

"It was very unfortunate that she chose to become confidential after all these years. I thought—that horrible smile again.—"that I had trained her better than that."

Some of Julie's fear gave place to loathing. Quietly, in perfect control of herself now, she waited for this man to prove himself everything Dawn had said he was. "Why don't you say what you came to say," she suggested calmly.

"You are very cool, young lady. Perhaps you do not realize how grave your danger is at this moment!"

"Perhaps not," Julie's eyes met his unflinchingly. "Suppose you tell me."

"That would be ungratifying to me," he laughed shortly. "I am 'distracted' that this should be my unpleasant duty—and to such a charming young woman as yourself. But," he shrugged, "it's war."

It came to Julie swiftly now that the man was stalling for time. That he knew Pete had come for help, or guessed as much, and was cornered and desperate. And (she thought but her omnisciently) a cornered rat is dangerous!

"I'm afraid I don't understand you," Julie said, stalling now herself.

"I'm certain you do. It is very unfortunate that my wife's mental collapse should have come at this moment. She has given you information which it is extremely dangerous for you to possess."

"Dawn's mental collapse," as you call it, merely helps me to understand why she is so frightened. You didn't really think that you could actually force her to join your bunch of gangsters, did you?"

The smile slid into a sneer. "She has joined forces with my government, Doctor Hamilton. She did that when she became my wife. I swore to it. She will keep that promise."

Julie shrugged with what she hoped passed for nonchalance. "Don't be absurd. This is America. Because Dawn made the mistake of marrying you is no reason that she will make the mistake of betraying her country."

"My wife will not make the mistake of defying me," he said smoothly.

"You sound very sure of yourself, sir," Julie defied him. "I am sure—now. You see, I am not so stupid as my wife's friends would believe me." He laughed quietly.

And to Julie's trained mind came the instant realization that the man was himself unbalanced. An egoist so intent on the drama of his own role that he lost touch with all real values, became vicious, depraved, sadistic. There were no lengths to which a man like this would not go to prove himself a man—mad.

"I am not unaware of the part you are playing, Doctor Hamilton. I am not unaware that you, suspicious, have been waiting since the morning I passed and entered the driveway to the Kellogg town house. I watched from a vantage point in the upper corner of the Kellogg summer home where I was—then—secretly lodging."

Julie felt a chill race along her spine. Those black eyes peering at her every moment that she and Barn proved through the empty summer house that day? No wonder Barn had felt "certain."

"I was informed by expert assistants of your every move during the unfortunate fire. And of your decision to follow your friends up here to these lonely mountains. From that moment I have regretted the time I took away of this meeting."

Could Cleopatra Ulcer a Pearl With Stomach Ailments?

An interesting story of Cleopatra is the one where an admirer praised the beauty of two of her pearls, whereupon she dropped one into a glass of wine and drank it. She would hardly have done this had she suffered after-aching pains. Those who are distressed with stomach or ulcer pains, indigestion, gas, pain, heartburn, burning sensation, bloating and other conditions caused by excess acid should try this. BOIL it all down, put it in a nutshell, say it in a couple of words—
... MEN and MONEY will win this war!

Men to fight—and Money to arm, equip, train, house, feed, move them.

Men, by the millions to shoot and win—and Money by the billions—the hundreds of thousands of millions—to make their guns, buy their uniforms, build their ships, pack their food, construct their camps, pay their salaries, fit out their planes, turn out their bullets and bombs and bayonets! Money—billions of dollars NOW to transport five, eight, twelve million clear-eyed Americans—

... into the mightiest, the most devastating and irresistible fighting machine the world has ever known.

Men—and Money—will crush our treacherous foes and win the war.

Uncle Sam needs your money to win this war. Only ten cents will buy five .45 caliber cartridges—five of America's enemies put out of action for the price of a good cigar! $3.50 buys a shell for a 37mm anti-tank gun—and that may mean one less tank for Hitler! $5.00 will buy a steel helmet that might save a soldier's life! $18.75, which is what you pay for a Bond worth $25.00 at maturity, will buy a complete field telephone or a high-altitude flying jacket; two of 'em—$37.50—will buy a marine barometer to help safeguard our fleet!

To make America safe, invest in United States War Savings Stamps and Bonds with every pay check. To keep America free, save at least ten per cent of your income in War Stamps and Bonds!

UNITED WAR CHEST

Can you afford to give less than 60 MINUTES PER MONTH when the boys in the Solomons are giving 24 HOURS A DAY?

The budget is $104,361.73 because Marion's usual agencies PLUS Marion's and Marion county's share in 15 ADDITIONAL agencies have been combined in one drive. This has been suggested by the President's Relief Control Board and is being done in practically every town and city in the United States.

This united drive will eliminate the need and expense for 20 separate drives. It is being conducted entirely with the help of local workers. There is no money being paid to a professional campaign manager.

The Marion city budget has been increased only slightly. Last year the budget for Marion's five agencies was $30,825. This year the budget for these same agencies is $32,775.95.

All of Marion county is included in this year's campaign because this is a War Campaign and war relief points to every person in Marion county. Pledges from Marion county go entirely to the 15 war agencies.

Give at least one hour's income per month per year. For example: If you earn $40 per week your contribution should be at least $1 per month or $12 per year.

Miss Schimmoller Plays Leading Role in Film.

BUCYRUS, Oct. 19 — A former Bucyrus woman, to whom goes a great portion of the credit for securing an airport for Bucyrus, returns via the silver screen this week when Miss Lauretta Schimmoller, recognized among the pilots of the air, appears at the Bucyrus Schenck theater in "Parachute Nurse," in which she appears in a prominent role.

Miss Schimmoller, who has established a name for herself in flying circles in the west since leaving Bucyrus more than 10 years ago, served in an advisory capacity in the filming of the picture in addition to playing the role of captain.

The flyer, who has gained the title of "Colonel" since leaving her home town, where she was manager of Port Bucyrus upon completion of the local port, was first recognized in the west as secretary-treasurer of the Ninety Nines, a women's flying nurses group, chartered at that time by Amelia Earhart, noted American flyer.

Col. Schimmoller is now an assistant to the wing medical officer of the civil air patrol at Burbank, Calif., and is assisting in the establishment of a medical detachment. She is also interested in radio-telephone and recently passed a test for a restricted operator.

Legion at Kenton Backs School Levy

Special to The Star

KENTON, O., Oct. 19 — The Kenton American Legion post has endorsed the proposed three-mill school levy in Kenton. The post also donated $25 to the United Service Organization; appointed Lloyd B. Kelly as chairman of its committee to speed the scrap salvage campaign in Hardin county, voted wholehearted cooperation in civilian defense, and threw open the post clubrooms for use of transient service men of the war.

Commander Harry Bloom said that Floyd Stewart, Rev. A. A. Ames and Fred Rush would plan for an Armistice day observance.

The Legion's World War cannon was offered to the scrap salvage drive and other mementos of the last war were loaned by the veterans into the scrap heap.

State Series of Bible Talks Opened at Baptist Church

"The Truth About the Revival of the Roman Empire" is the subject on which Dr. O. E. Phillips of Los Angeles will speak tonight at Emmanuel Baptist church. A week's prophetic Bible conference, conducted by Dr. Phillips opened last night. He spoke on "From Calvary to David's Throne."

Psalm 22 was the basis for the study of the spiritual and physical sufferings of Christ on the cross "followed by the victorious cry of release," and the "future millennial Kingdom over which the One who suffered in humiliation will reign in power and great glory." Services will be at 7:30 each night.

Civilian Defense and Civil Air Patrol Complete Tuesday "Bombing" Plans

Public Asked To Cooperate in Mock Aerial Attacks: Purpose of Maneuvers Explained.

Final arrangements have been completed by the combined civil air patrol and civilian defense organization for a full-scale mock bombing of Marion, LaRue and Prospect on Tuesday.

Both groups will be mobilized at 5:30 p. m. by telephone. Shortly afterward the "bombing" will start and will consist of two waves of attack.

In Marion 400 mock bombs will be dropped and Prospect and LaRue each will receive 25.

The bombs will be a sawdust-filled paper sack with a red or green paper streamer to increase visibility. Each bomb will carry a note telling the type of bomb represented and the damage it could do if it were the real thing. By this method each bomb will create an incident which will be handled by the warden as an actual occurrence.

Citizens are asked to cooperate with the air raid wardens' request to remain under cover during the dropping of the bombs, and later to call the warden's attention to bombs undiscovered by him. The warden should be taken to the bomb; the bomb should not be picked up and carried to the warden.

The warden will ask to use the nearest telephone and will report the incident to the central control office. From the office services will be ordered out as needed to each incident. Actual movement of various equipment will not be made but all orders will be given and carried out up to the actual movement of the equipment itself.

This mobilization will not include a blackout and will be fully completed before darkness. Factory whistles and aerial alarms will not be used to sound the alert, as this method of alerting Marion is being reserved for the first blackout, which undoubtedly will be the next mobilization event.

This will be the first introduction of the civil air patrol to Marion as a unit working on conjunction with civilian defense.

Formed Early This Year

The CAP of Marion was formed in February of 1942 under the direction of the CAP national headquarters in Washington, D. C. It is a part of the national organization of civilian aviation resources, with the purpose of developing a personnel capable of rendering service to the military and essential civilian needs.

Today hundreds of civil air patrol members are on active patrol duty, especially on the coasts. These civilian pilots are patrolling sea lanes, with small planes, at low altitudes, in search of enemy submarines and other duties that relieve army pilots for more important jobs at the fighting fronts.

The Marion CAP has already taken its trained members on full-scale coast duty. In case of local emergency they will perform valuable services that no other local organization is capable of handling, such as counter service for the army, urgent transportation or supply service for war industries, which cannot be handled by other commercial means in the required time and the patrolling of pipe lines, railroads, etc.

Flights Required

The members of the civil air patrol are required to participate in flight missions which will further their knowledge of flying. Such missions as navigation missions, message pick-up and dropping, bombing, aircraft interception, etc., all increasing the value of the CAP members for active duty. These missions must be performed by the CAP members and their value can be increased if their missions can be coordinated with other civilian defense activities.

Civil air patrol units throughout the country have performed mock bombing missions for hundreds of communities in connection with other defense preparedness activities. In this mock bombing of Marion the air time will apply on the training hour requirements which are necessary to qualify as a fulltime active patrol duty pilot.

The total expense of each individual to complete this training is borne by himself. The CAP has full sanction of the government in the use of gasoline and rubber to train its personnel.

Stocks Hold Fairly Firm

Market Fails To Develop Leadership but Losses Are Few and Small.

By The Associated Press

NEW YORK, Oct. 19.—The stock market was a narrow and leaderless affair today but its undercurrent remained relatively steady despite minor loss of ground by some of the pivotal issues.

Aircraft drew a little support at slightly higher levels as did some specialties, copper and rails. Steels and motors were a bit backward at times.

Stocks giving a fairly good account of themselves included Sears Roebuck, Glenn Martin, Sperry, Air Reduction, American Can, Owens-Illinois, Erie, and Chesapeake & Ohio.

Bonds were irregular and commodities a shade lower.

Investment and speculative quarters manifested relief over prospects the new tax bill would be in form for the President's signature Wednesday evening.

Followers of the rail shares debated the implications of last week's warnings that the carriers were moving toward an equipment crisis. Bearing upon the remarks of these officials was the report that the bureau of agricultural economics predicted a 1943 boost of 15 per cent in rail traffic over the current year.

conquered peoples of Europe rebelling at the Nazi campaign to recruit labor for war industries. German and Italian troops were said to have fired on a crowd of Greek transport workers in Athens.

Evidence of increased German pressure was particularly strong in unoccupied France, where 500 Gestapo agents were said to have been assigned to rounding up workers to be sent to the reich.

The fighting French news agency said the Vichy government, unsuccessful in its efforts to recruit enough workers to satisfy German demands, had agreed to nationalize the secret police agents to facilitate their work.

Register Men Today

This reported move coincided with an announcement by Paris radio that registration of all men between 18 and 50 for forced labor would begin today in the unoccupied zone. Women between the ages of 21 and 35 also are subject to call.

The Vichy radio, meanwhile, broadcast a warning to Frenchmen declaring it was their duty to answer German calls for manpower in order to avoid "fresh painful military action and avert new catastrophes."

In Norway, dispatches from Sweden said, the Germans have ordered all Americans placed under arrest, presumably to prevent their working with Norwegian patriots engaged in sabotage.

In Holland the Germans were reported to have executed 15 more Dutchmen for recent acts of sabotage and were said to be speeding a mass evacuation of the population from coastal areas where invasion defenses are being strengthened.

From the Vichy radio came a report that Karl Hermann Frank, German secretary of state for Bohemia and Moravia, had ordered the relatives of "all Czech agitators who have taken refuge in London" be sent to concentration camps. Frank warned the Czechs that wholesale arrests, executions, and deportations would be meted out as a result of the assassination of Reinhard Heydrich, German protector in Prague.

This ominous statement was followed by a Reuters dispatch from Zurich reporting that seven more Czechs had been executed.

Nerve Cures

WHEN a surgeon decides that what is wrong with most of his patients is not that they need an operation, but that their nerves, that's news.

A few weeks ago I told of the ideas of my friend, Dr. Alvarez, that so many chronic patients did not have organic disease but had a constitutional inadequacy. Dr. Alvarez wrote me that of the many complimentary letters he had received on the publication of his paper, only one came from a surgeon. But to make up for that here comes a surgeon, Dr. Arnold S. Jackson, of Madison, Wisconsin, with a book entitled "The Answer Is Your Nerves." It is evident that what Dr. Jackson means by "Your Nerves" is much the same as what Dr. Alvarez means by constitutional inadequacy.

Dr. Jackson, from a long experience of seeing patients daily, most of whom are convinced that they need a surgical operation to get well, has found that a very large proportion of them are sick because their nerves have gone awry, and that their nerves have jumped the track, not on account of any organic illness but because they have never learned how to live economically and rationally.

In our American life men keep pushing grins on to something they do not want, and women are continually rushing in a terrific hurry to get nowhere. They pound and hammer and strain their poor old nervous reserves, cashing checks on them without ever balancing the account until one day they find the bank is empty. Their health is busted. They had an inflation with an inevitable depression.

Dr. Jackson, whose largest experience is in the field of gynecology, has several valuable chapters on this subject with helpful remarks on how to determine whether the symptoms one has are really due to enlargement of the thyroid gland.

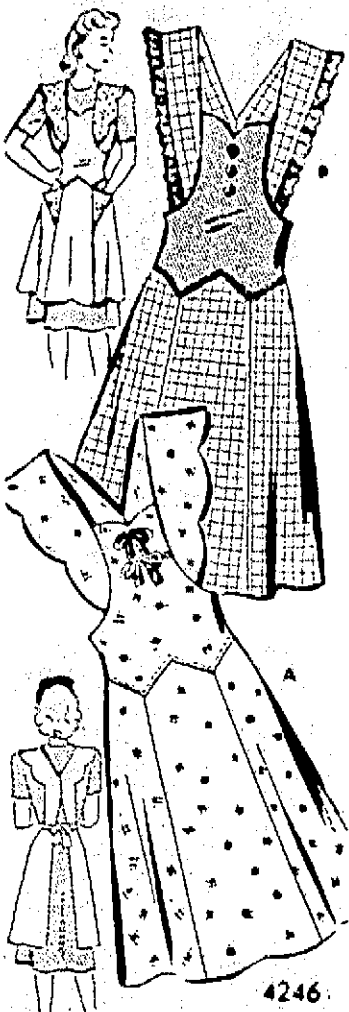

Under the heading "Nerves in the Nursery" he remarks on the children brought up in a jazz age with the horror stories pouring in, the pressure of school lessons, piano lessons, athletic contests, dancing school, all making things as competitive as possible, and concludes: "Many of the young people of today are actually burned out by the time they finish college, and all too often this stage is reached even in high school."

The modern woman often undertakes as strenuous a program as the modern man. Dr. Jackson has a list of former club women, Little Theater, society leader, expert bridge player, speech-making woman, who came to him in middle age with a paper on which were written 20 symptoms she had, such as: insomnia, poor appetite, indigestion, bitter taste in the mouth, constipation, heartburn, pains in back of neck, unbearable home life. She was much surprised when the doctor could find nothing to cut out of her life.

The encouraging thing is that forward-looking surgeons are

Pitfalls of Love

By ADELE GARRISON

CAROLYN looked at me in sudden wide-eyed dismay. "Are you sure she will want to see me?" she quavered. "She was so good to me, yet I tried to use her to get out, and—"

As her voice trailed away despairingly, I hastened to tell her what I knew Lillian would say. "When Mrs. Underwood realizes that you have no guilty knowledge of Marion's whereabouts, and that you were trying to get out only because you thought this unspeakable Ray could tell you something of Marion, she not only will forgive you for deceiving her, but will welcome you with open arms."

"Oh, I don't deserve it," she said, and I was more convinced than ever that Marion in some way had offered herself as a scapegoat for Carolyn.

But that I did not know certainly, and there was no doubt of Carolyn's urgent need of motherly sympathy. I knew, too, that Lillian needed the healing of consoling Carolyn and having her faith in Carolyn's loyalty to Marion restored.

"There is only one thing you must clear up, Carolyn, before you go to Mrs. Underwood," I said. "I had to convince her of the role you were playing, and in so doing, I had to tell her of the monstrous thing you had told me—that Marion had come away with a man to be married."

Admits Lying

"I lied, of course," she faltered at last. "But I was nearly crazy that day on the road to Dalemont. I was afraid Marion would be killed if I didn't go with Rico, and you wouldn't listen to me."

At first I thought she was trying again to play on my sympathies, and it was difficult for me to substitute belief for doubt. But disbelieved by the convincing, unmistakable note of truth in her voice, my last doubt faded.

"I couldn't listen to you that day, Carolyn," I said. "You were in such danger yourself that we had to be firm and severe with you. But now you are no longer in peril and I am ready to help you in any way I can."

"Would you like me to explain to Marion's mother why you said that awful thing about her?" I asked.

recognizing this situation. Time was in the early days of aseptic surgery when the surgeon would operate on anyone. Heaven only knows how many of the purely nervous patients carry surgical scars. But the surgeons are learning restraint.

Worried About Ronald

"Of course, child," I told her. "And—and," she faltered — "would you tell Ron also? When he talked to me his voice sounded so disgusted, and I couldn't blame him. But it just breaks my heart to have Ron go back on me."

"He hasn't gone back on you," I assured her. "His nerves will. But he is very distressed about you, and nobody will be happier than he to find out that you are ready to play the game with us."

"I'm ready to do that, all right," she said fervently. "Just tell me what you want me to do, and I'll do it if it kills me."

"I don't think we shall be that drastic, Carolyn," I said, smiling. "And, now we must get back to the Underwoods. I'll call Miss Whitlock back to help you while I tell my father and Uncle Dicky of the splendid way you are co-operating with us."

Her eyes were suddenly shadowed, and I knew she was thinking of her personal secret. "I—uh—," she said, and looked at me wistfully, her sentence not completed.

The Stars Say—

THE LUNAR transit for this day hold augury of difficult and delaying conditions generally. A depressing, limiting and discouraging state of affairs may have devastating reaction on the physical health as well as mental outlook. Take a day off.

Those whose birthday it is may be prepared for a year in which little progress or productivity may be expected. Things appear to be static or crystallized, and a sense of frustration or defeat may superinduce depression of spirits. In a child born on this day may be prone to a depressed state of mind.
